Waveland seeking ordinance to ban time-sharing condos

By WAYNE DUGOMB JR.

The City of Waveland is considering drafting an ordinance prohibiting timesharing condominium developments on beachfront property.

Barbara Raapold, city clerk, and Ward One alderman, at a Tuesday night meeting requested the board direct its attorney to draft the ordinance.

Raapold said she requested the ordinance after surveying numerous beachfront buildings. New Orleans immediately invested funds to build a 4-unit time-sharing condominium complex near the corner of Aiken Drive and Beach Boulevard.

RBH Properties is planning to build the complex named Fair Oaks Vacation Villas, in which units will be sold primarily for one-week annual periods. The alderman reported. "My con-councilmen in Ward One have objected to the development basically because they feel the complex would commercialize a residential area,"

Richard B. Hymel of the New Orleans company Friday said he was not aware of the alderman's actions.

The developer said he brought the fully explained the complete scope of the complex to Raapold in June.

"I also talked with surrounding residents and to many Waveland citizens who live in New Orleans," Hymel said, "to be aware of the development." He stated,

"I can understand people's feelings that it could be more of a commercial development but even if we built condominiums or apartments on the beach, there would be the same number of people residing there at any given time," the developer explained.

Ludden Gex, city attorney and judge, said, "The question is if our present zoning ordinance considers time-sharing developments."

He noted the beachfront area in question is zoned R-3 which allows multi-family units such as apartments and condominiums.

"I don't know if time-sharing developments were envisioned when the ordinances were written and adopted several years ago," Gex stated.

Raapold said, "The development would be more acceptable in a hotel area."

Gex said a public hearing would be necessary before adoption of any new ordinance.

"I'll draw up an ordinance and see what we have to do regarding advertisement and hearings," he stated.

Hymel reported he would attend any public hearings to explain his point of view.

He said if an ordinance is adopted which would bar time-sharing units that his company would probably erect apartments or condominiums on the property.

"I was planning to move there to live. It's my property and I plan to build something," he added.

Raapold said, "This development represents a commercialization of the beach."

Mayor John Longo stated, "I've always been against commercialization of the beach."

Longo reported he once discussed with RBH officials the feasibility of placing condominiums on the Aiken Drive property but did not know of the time-sharing plan.

Wastewater extension may give Bay breathing room

By BRENT MACEY

A recent extension of the Federal Clean Water Act until 1985 without a firm deadline to Waveland and Bay St. Louis Mayor Larry Bennett noted the extension will give the federal government more time to work on a wastewater treatment plant.

A deadline for all cities to meet clean-water standards by constructing wastewater treatment plants was previously set for July 1, 1981. Coastal cities have been making a mad scramble trying to comply with the requirement in time.

Now cities will have until 1985, but a search included in the extension apparently is still proceeding. County authorities to resolve the issue before 1984.

The extension, like the federal government's wastewater treatment plant, is prepared by two segments. He hopes one will be accepted and implemented before the 1984 deadline so that Bay St. Louis will be able to receive 70 percent federal matching money.

Of those two plans, the Bay City Council is looking more closely at a plan prepared by the Baton Rouge engineering firm of Owen and White.

The firm proposes that Bay St. Louis enlarge and expand its current wastewater sewer lagoon to a multi-cell lagoon system.

Although Owen and White consider that treatment method the cheapest, most cost effective means for Bay St.

Louis to comply with clean water standards, Bennett noted. "Lewis Eaton (Waveland's engineer) says his plan is also more cost effective."

That plan calls for Bay St. Louis to construct a wastewater treatment facility at the Waveland Marina.

Car strip suspect arrested

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Hancock County Sheriff's Department deputies Friday after answering a call in Pearl River were involved in a high-speed chase and arrested a man who apparently was speeded a tampered vehicle on US-90. Hancock Investigator Alvin Ludden reported Saturday.

Ludden stated, "Deputies Ronnie Cuevas and Glen Strong were answering a call in Pearl River when they noticed a tamperable on the side of US-90 with a familiar pickup truck parked behind it."

When the two deputies completed their assignment in Pearl River, they checked on the car and realized it had been stripped. An all points bulletin was issued for Joe Goodman, 25, of General Delivery in Pearl River, as a suspect in the incident, Ludden added.

The investigator continued, "Goodman was located in Pearl River and was apprehended by Cuevas and Strong after a high-speed chase through the community which ended when the suspect drove his truck into a ditch."

The suspect has been charged with grand larceny and possession of a small amount of marijuana. He is being held in the Hancock jail in lieu of $20,000 bond, Ludden confirmed.

A preliminary hearing for Goodman is scheduled before Justice Court Judge Lee Khan on March 1.

Ludden said wheels, a battery and a speaker were among the items the deputies found in the car driven by Goodman when he was arrested.

Owners of the stripped vehicle are being interviewed and a conclusion is expected to be reached on the damage to the car.

Two facing charges of prescription forgery

By PRENTICE MACEY

The Hancock County Sheriff's Department is investigating numerous pharmacies along the coast after arresting two women yesterday.

That day and continuing the investigation, two women will be arrested following their release from a hospital where they are receiving treatment for drug use, Sheriff Ronald Peterson said.

Patricia Ann Kincaid, 22, of 22 Boardman Avenue, charged with four counts of uttering forgery.

Tom Peirce, 47, of Route 2, Box 604-R, Bayshore Park, is charged with one count of prescription forgery.

Kincaid was released Thursday on $10,000 bond and is scheduled for trial hearing before Justice Court Judge John Chevalier.

Madeira was released on a $5,000 bond and is scheduled for trial hearing before Circuit Court Judge Lee Kleman.

Peterson stated some prescription pads were allegedly stolen from a Hancock County doctor's office and another doctor's office in Long Beach.

The sheriff alleges Kincaid wrote out prescriptions and then apparently gave those prescriptions to two other women who then went to several pharmacies to have the prescriptions filled.

"The two women whose names have not yet been released, seemed to be in need of drug treatment when they were questioned here Thursday," Peterson stated.

He noted one of these women was sent to East Michigan State Hospital in Midland for treatment and the other was sent to Gulfport Memorial Hospital for the same reason.

The sheriff said all four women allegedly divided the drugs between one another.

Investigation which began last Monday was charged that prescription forgery because she allegedly knew the drugs were obtained illegally.

Raines, 35, investigator, Peterson said, is in charge of the investigation.

Seay said he expects more than four arrests to result from the investigation.

Wastewater

the past seven years, is one of the most modern treatment plants on the coast and is currently meeting clean water standards.

"We have a lot of figures to look at before we can decide what is feasible," Bennett said.

"We will definitely be going through them (the figures of both plant) on a thorough basis."

He noted that procedure will not be as lengthy as starting from scratch and therefore it would not be long before St. Louis will reach a decision on what course to follow well before 1985.

The new deadline will have even less of an effect on Waveland.

Waveland Alderman Barbara Rappold, city clerk and secretary of the Waveland Wastewater Authority, noted Waveland is meeting clean water standards and only needs to extend an outfall line from the Waveland plant to the Jordan River in order to bring that city up to compliance with Environmental Protection Agency standards.

A plan for extending that outfall line has been submitted to the State Department of Air and Water Pollution Control for review.

However, to make matters more complex, Rappold said the City of Waveland is still waiting to receive acceptance from the State Department of Natural Resources as a separate wastewater system in order to receive funding for the project.

The State of Mississippi has fought hardly to accept the wastewater plant.

Charles Blazek, executive director of the Department of Natural Resources, recently sent letters to the Hancock County Board of Supervisors, and the city government of Bay St. Louis and Waveland, asking for contributions supporting a Hancock County Wastewater Authority.

Similar letters also were sent to governing bodies in Harrison County.

The Department noted it still favored a three-county plan, but it appears that Gulf Coast officials, particularly Harrison and Hancock Counties, in Harrison and Hancock Counties, are strongly tilted toward county-wide authority instead of the three-county plan.

Only recently has the state agreed to the possibility of accepting independent county-run wastewater plants.

An appeal is being issued again by J.D. (Big John) Rutherford, chairman of the Hancock County Blood Bank, for persons to attend the blood drawing Wednesday.

Like in recent times, the Hancock County blood supply is very low, as a matter of fact, a special drawing had to be held a few weeks ago at the National Guard Armory.

We hope many will visit the American Legion Post Home, Blue Meadow Road, Bay St. Louis, Wednesday between 2 and 6 p.m. and donate a unit of blood.

Many persons donate their time each drawing such as doctors, nurses, aides and record keepers because they know the importance of having a good blood supply on hand for Hancock County residents.

So, if you are able to give a little blood, please do so.

We noted at past drawings many students from St. Stanislaus—what about students from Bay Senior High and Hancock North Central.

At the last drawing the students of St. Stanislaus donated 42 units and we understand they are going to try and top that mark this Wednesday.

It sure would be good if the students of Bay Senior High and Hancock North Central would try to see how many they could muster at the blood drawing.

We understand many folks are busy preparing their floats for Mardi Gras Parades.

We hope folks will enjoy themselves at the parades.

Well, the grand marshal for Nereids Parade is Karen Hopper, the current Miss Mississippi, and this should lend a lot of beauty to the annual event.

A record number of 4,400 persons have filed for their Homestead Exemptions during the month of January.

A total of 5,500 homestead exemptions were mailed out by Edward Murtagh, Hancock tax collector/treasurer at the beginning of the month of January.

Most homeowners returning homestead exemptions realize the importance of handling this matter as soon as possible because if it is forgotten it could cost much money in extra taxes.

Murtagh said 200 of the homestead exemptions are new and his office expects another 200 new applicants.

We urge all persons who have received their homestead exemption applications to mail them in as soon as possible. You can forget and go past the January deadline. It could cause your taxes to be doubled if you qualify and do not file.

By being able to handle the transaction by mail enables taxpayers to save time.

Our local Chamber of Commerce is trying to encourage the local stores to advertise more so our town can become a stronger trade center. What kind of leverage should we use?

Dear LSWU: Indeed, I would guess but I really don't know.

To me, this is the mystery of the ages. It's not like you were asking them to do you a favor.

But, back to indirect "leverage"—by this I mean if you can come up with special events and promotions to draw would-be customers to your town the merchants would hopefully get on the band wagon and try to take some advantage of the situation.

You are right though. The only way you can become a viable trade center is through local stores promoting individually or in concert goods and services of sufficient quality and quantity at competitive prices.

An impression of your town is made on everyone; local, healthy or far away.

whenever there is an issue of the local newspaper.

And one of the primary impressions is that made by the ads. Even a casual reader gets a feel for the number and type of stores; the quality of the merchandise and the completeness of the offerings.

Any segment of the business community not involved in the regular advertising makes for an impression of an incomplete trade center.

Not only are they letting down their fellow merchants, they are also short changing their regular customers, employees and themselves.

Advertising builds traffic and volume. Volumes sales result in lower prices and produces higher overall profits that benefit everyone concerned.

MISSISSIPPI

We agree that Governor Winter's goals to develop our education and training resources in Mississippi are worthwhile. His proposed method of funding them is not.

His proposal to increase oil and gas severance taxes will significantly affect future exploration in Mississippi.

Governor Winter has introduced a bill to increase by 50% the oil and gas severance taxes you now pay—an increase from 6% of value to 9% of value. That 50% increase will significantly reduce royalty revenue you now receive.

The increased tax burden on thousands of Mississippi mineral owners will be $68 million in fiscal 1983 alone. That's on top of the projected $145 million you will already pay in severance taxes.

Mississippi already has one of the highest severance taxes in the nation. To raise taxes even higher will make the cost of drilling in Mississippi non-competitive with other oil and gas producing states.

Future drilling in Mississippi is in jeopardy. The oil and gas industry may find it more profitable to drill in neighboring states where there is a greater opportunity for return on risk investment.

For example, if Louisiana's severance tax laws were applied to Mississippi, we would have an average oil and gas severance tax rate of 5.1% as compared to our current rate of 6%.

The Governor's pending legislation threatens the growth of one of our blue chip industries—an industry that is already the single most taxed industry in Mississippi.

We urge Governor Winter to join the oil and gas industry in seeking alternatives for funding his programs—alternatives which will encourage oil and gas production in Mississippi, not threaten it.

Jourdan Estates residents object to water proposal

By WAYNE DUCOMBE JR.

Some 15 Jourdan River Estates residents crowded into a City Hall meeting room at a Waveland Board of Aldermen meeting Tuesday night objecting to a proposal in which the city would extend water service to the subdivision.

The subdivision is located about two miles north of Waveland's city limits and immediately west of the confluence of Jourdan River and Edwards Bayou.

W.L. Runnels of the subdivision's property owners association told the aldermen at a recent meeting that Jourdan Estate's water system has deteriorated and Hancock County Health Department officials have warned of potential health hazards if the system is not replaced.

Several residents attending the Tuesday meeting said they were not notified of the association's plans to seek Waveland water.

Runnels said, "All we're trying to do is gather information so we can present a proposal to the property owners."

Mayor John Longo stated, "We have no jurisdiction in that subdivision, but we're not going to ignore someone who is in want of a drink of water."

"We can't get involved in a water system at Jourdan Estates unless you all (the subdivision's residents) are in favor 100 percent," the mayor said.

"But we want to be neighborly and help you out if we can," Longo reported.

Another Jourdan Estates resident reported, "We're not here to knock the City of Waveland. This water situation started as a feud and more involved everybody else unknowingly involved in the feud and that includes Runnels."

Longo said, "The city stands ready to help where we can."

Runnels added, "I felt I had an obligation to help remedy this water problem if I could."

In other business at the 7:30 p.m. regular meeting, the board:

—Approved transferring remaining Middletown Housing Rehabilitation Project federal funds to new construction projects.

—Authorized Longo to sign a State Department of Natural Resources Bureau of Pollution Control resolution confirming the city will join a countywide wastewater treatment district.

—Authorized Longo to sign an application for funds for new Middletown projects.

—Authorized Lewis-Eaton Park

membership of Jackson to submit applications to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to secure additional funds for Middletown projects.

—Received a County Blood Bank letter reporting a blood drawing from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. Wednesday at American Legion Post No. 159 in Bay St Louis.

CREATIVE BUSINESS — When Bill Moyers was in college, he wrote a paper describing his own original concept of distribution. Fifteen years later, he translated that theory into a hugely successful business venture, Federal Express.

Bill Moyers visits with Smith's "Creativity with Bill Moyers" at 7 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 7, on the Mississippi ETV Network.

In Smith's creative solution was "overnight" package delivery. But such delivery was impossible if parts and pieces had to be shipped from every city in the United States to every other city directly. His solution was to ship all packages to Memphis, a central location, and get them out a few hours later to where they were needed! All it took, he was to discover, was a fleet of 60 planes, about 3,000 trucks and vans and some 3,000 employees.

Today Federal Express profitably carries 120,000 packages of all kinds every night to Memphis and then out to their destinations within four hours. The company is far and away one of the most successful in its field.

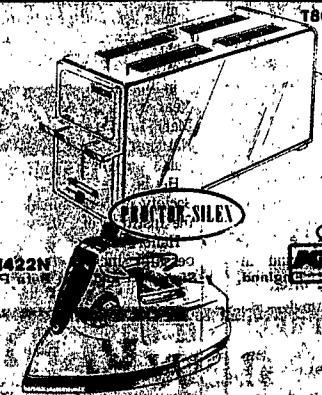

FINALIZING A LOAN — Members of the Kiln Water and Fire Protection District meet with the Hancock County Board of Supervisors recently to announce the finalization of a bond obtained through the Farmers Home Administration which will finance phase two of a project to bring water service and fire protection to residents of Rocky Hill Community and Firetower Road. The $120,000 bond will be combined with a $50,000 grant and $7,000 left over from Phase One of a $500,000 water project which brought fire protection and water service to Kiln residents last year. Phase Two of the project, now 90 percent complete, was financed by an interim loan through Hancock Bank until this bond was finalized. Participating in the ceremony are, from left, James Ginn, vice president of Hancock Bank; John Campion, project engineer with Gerber and Russell Associates Engineers; Michael Bain, attorney for the district; Doyle Hayden, district director of Phase One; Billy Sims, district secretary-treasurer; Cleveland Wyatt, district chairman; James Travirca, Beat 5 supervisor; and Sam Ferliclare, Beat 4 supervisor. Democracy more treasured than sealed meeting room or locked file cabinet

EDITOR'S NOTE: State Rep. Dennis Dollar is a second-term lawmaker from Gulfport. He has been in the forefront of legislative efforts on behalf of open records and open records legislation in recent legislative sessions.

Dollar, 27, was first elected to the Mississippi House of Representatives in 1976. He serves on the powerful Ways and Means Committee as well as the Education and Judicial Committees. He serves as vice-chairman of the Committee on Investigation of State Offices.

By DENNIS DOLLAR

Our Jeffersonian democracy rests upon the basic proposition that an informed citizenry is necessary to protect the blessings of liberty. Our forefathers believed in and died for.

In fact, informed citizens are the single most necessary ingredient for a more responsive, efficient and honest government. After all, it is only we citizens who can collectively use our muscle at the ballot box and demand better government by changing policy-makers at election time.

In a nation where the Founding Fathers believed in the importance of an informed citizenry so much that they vested the core functions of government in the hands of "we the people" and later wrote a national creed proudly proclaiming our government to be "of, by and for the people," it is passing strange that we should even be debating the question of whether the public should have access to the government.

Still, in Mississippi, as public access relates to the opening of certain governmental records, the debate goes on.

"In the past two legislative sessions, a bill to define an open records policy for the State of Mississippi has been defeated by the parliamentary maneuvering of a small group of vocal opponents who are laboring under several serious misconceptions about what an open records law would do. In this article, we hope to clear up those misconceptions.

The opponents of open records maintain that passage of such a law would violate obvious areas of confidentiality. They paint a picture of personal privacy becoming virtually nonexistent in Mississippi as public bodies are somehow forced against their will to release unnamed private papers or individual laws abiding citizens throughout the state.

These opponents overlook the fact that the proposed law applies only to governmental documents, not to anyone's private papers. It is certainly to be hoped that no governmental agency in our state has compiled volumes of records about each of our private lives. If they have, then we face a more serious threat to our privacy from that type of government than we will ever face from the public who simply wants to inspect the government's records.

Mississippi's proposed open records law exempts from disclosure those most sensitive types of records: tax returns, medical records, adoption records, confidential business data, law enforcement documents relating to ongoing criminal investigations and related judicial records, school records, license examination answers, among others. There can be little doubt among reasonable people that confidentiality and privacy are protected well by the proposed open records law.

Another claim by the opponents of open records legislation is that a written law is unnecessary because of the unwritten common law which has been interpreted in some instances to provide for access to and inspection of public records. This basic need for guidelines in the releasing of public records has been recognized by forty-nine states and the national government. All of them have a written open records law, none of which have been successfully challenged on constitutional grounds nor repealed by subsequent legislative action.

Only Mississippi stands with the dubious distinction of having no written law providing for public access to the records of the government we support with our tax dollars.

One of the biggest misconceptions held by the opponents of open records has unfortunately been one of the most deadly to our efforts on behalf of the bill. For some unfounded reason, they have been able to persuade many legislative and executive officials that "open records legislation" is designed primarily to benefit the press and that the public will not benefit from its passage as much as will the news media with its investigative reporters seeking to uncover scandals in government as a means to sell newspapers. In actuality, if government is a slight more democracy and needs to be uncovered, it is not by state auditors or white collar crime units, why not by the news media? After all, it is always the public which has the final decision on acceptance or rejection of the press' findings. And as the old saying goes, "those with nothing to hide have nothing to fear."

A written law is needed to spell out in black and white which records should be open and which should not. Procedures for inspecting and copying the records should be standardized, and a formal appeal process should be available for anyone who feels that he or she has been wronged by the procedure.

Very simply, this is what we seek to accomplish through our proposed open records law.

This type of written law is needed both to protect the public from recalcitrant records custodians and to also protect the many well-intentioned custodians from erroneously releasing or not releasing certain records because of the lack of guidelines.

Shopping for insurance will provide best buys

Shopping around for insurance pays off just as does shopping for best buys in food, clothing, appliances.

"Compare policies from different companies," says Beverly Riggs, Extension area consumer management specialist.

Do not assume that low-cost companies have a poor product. Companies with the strongest financial ratings and the best reputation for service often offer the best insurance bargains. Evaluate service and price."

Group insurance is available, generally, to save money. Increasingly, employers are offering employees group life and health insurance as a part of their fringe benefit package. It may be necessary to supplement group insurance with other insurance to meet family needs adequately.

Insurance agents should be selected on some basis other than who first comes knocking on the door one day. People with experience in dealing with insurance agents—bankers, lawyers, accountants, business people or personal friends—can make helpful recommendations.

The initials CLU (Chartered Life Underwriters) designate agents as having special educational and professional qualifications in selling life insurance. Be sure that the insurance agent can communicate well with you and can answer your questions. A good agent should do more than send a bill and holiday greeting each year, she adds.

The buyer of insurance has certain responsibilities as an insurance owner. Miss Riggs outlines these responsibilities:

Understand the provisions of the policy before purchasing. Read and understand the basic provisions and benefits as well as the restrictions and limitations of your policy. If there are questions, ask the agent to write the company.

Keep the policy in a safe place. If policies are kept at home for ready reference, the policy numbers should be kept in a safe deposit box. With the policy numbers available, duplicate policies can be issued if policies should be lost or destroyed.

Family members, especially beneficiaries, or their insured, to a lower auto insurance premium, and changes in policies or unneeded policies. The number of dependents in the family may have increased or decreased.

Insurance needs change as stresses. The adequacy of insurance should not be considered alone, but in connection with other assets and the number and situation of people who depend on the protection of the insurance.

Adequate insurance protection is vital to the economic well-being of a family, but too much insurance protection uses financial resources that could provide other goods and services for the family.
